Above—At 2:30 P.M. every day, inside Tony's you'll find this couple. Everyone associated with Chelsea knows that this is the favorite hangout of all Chelsea students.

Left Center—Entering the Chelsea gates at the time of a game all students will remember this familiar sight.

Immediate left—For months an end we had been awaiting the completion of the Mystic River Bridge. The majestic structure which now adorns our city is one of the largest bridges in the United States, and we students at Chelsea Senior High School will long remember this very vital turning point in the city of Chelsea's history half-way through the twentieth century.

They lead the way

Davis, our Master, has been serving in this capacity for twenty-nine years. Mr. Cotter has been our Junior Master for five years. In that time, these two have won for themselves a host of friends.

Office Girls—Evelyn McGauley, Mary Rose Skrabut, Cynthia Roller, Mary Lanzo, Helen Suszynski.

Every democratic group has its leaders, including the Chelsea High School. They guide us along the road of education and are always ready to assist us. With such capable leaders, we are sure to succeed in our endeavors.

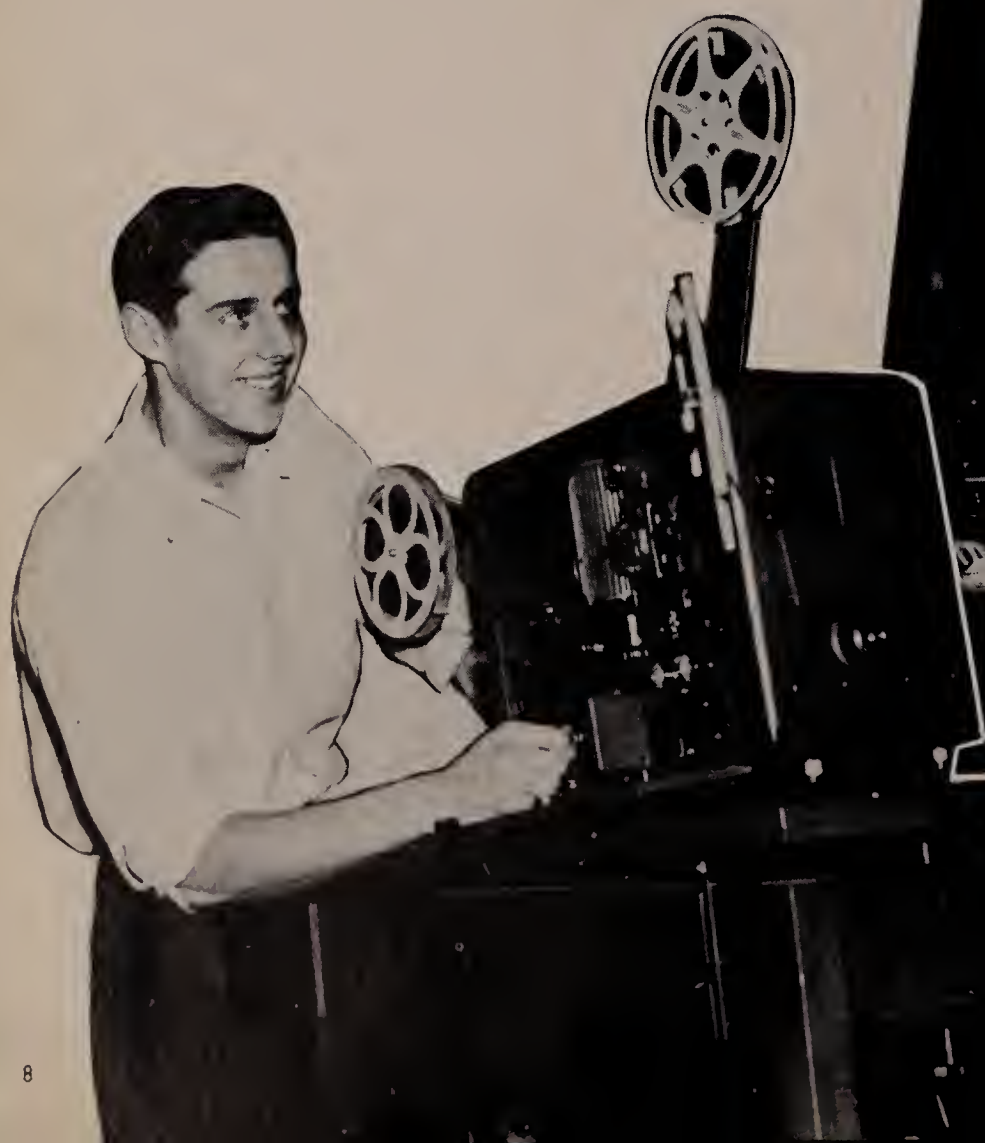

Mr. J. Frank Herlihy, a former member of the Chelsea Senior High School faculty, now holds the position of Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Herlihy graduated from Boston College in 1928 and has to his credit an A.B. degree and a Master's Degree in Administration.

Miss Etta Kotzen, aided by Miss Ann E. Donnelly, efficiently handles the clerical work in the office.

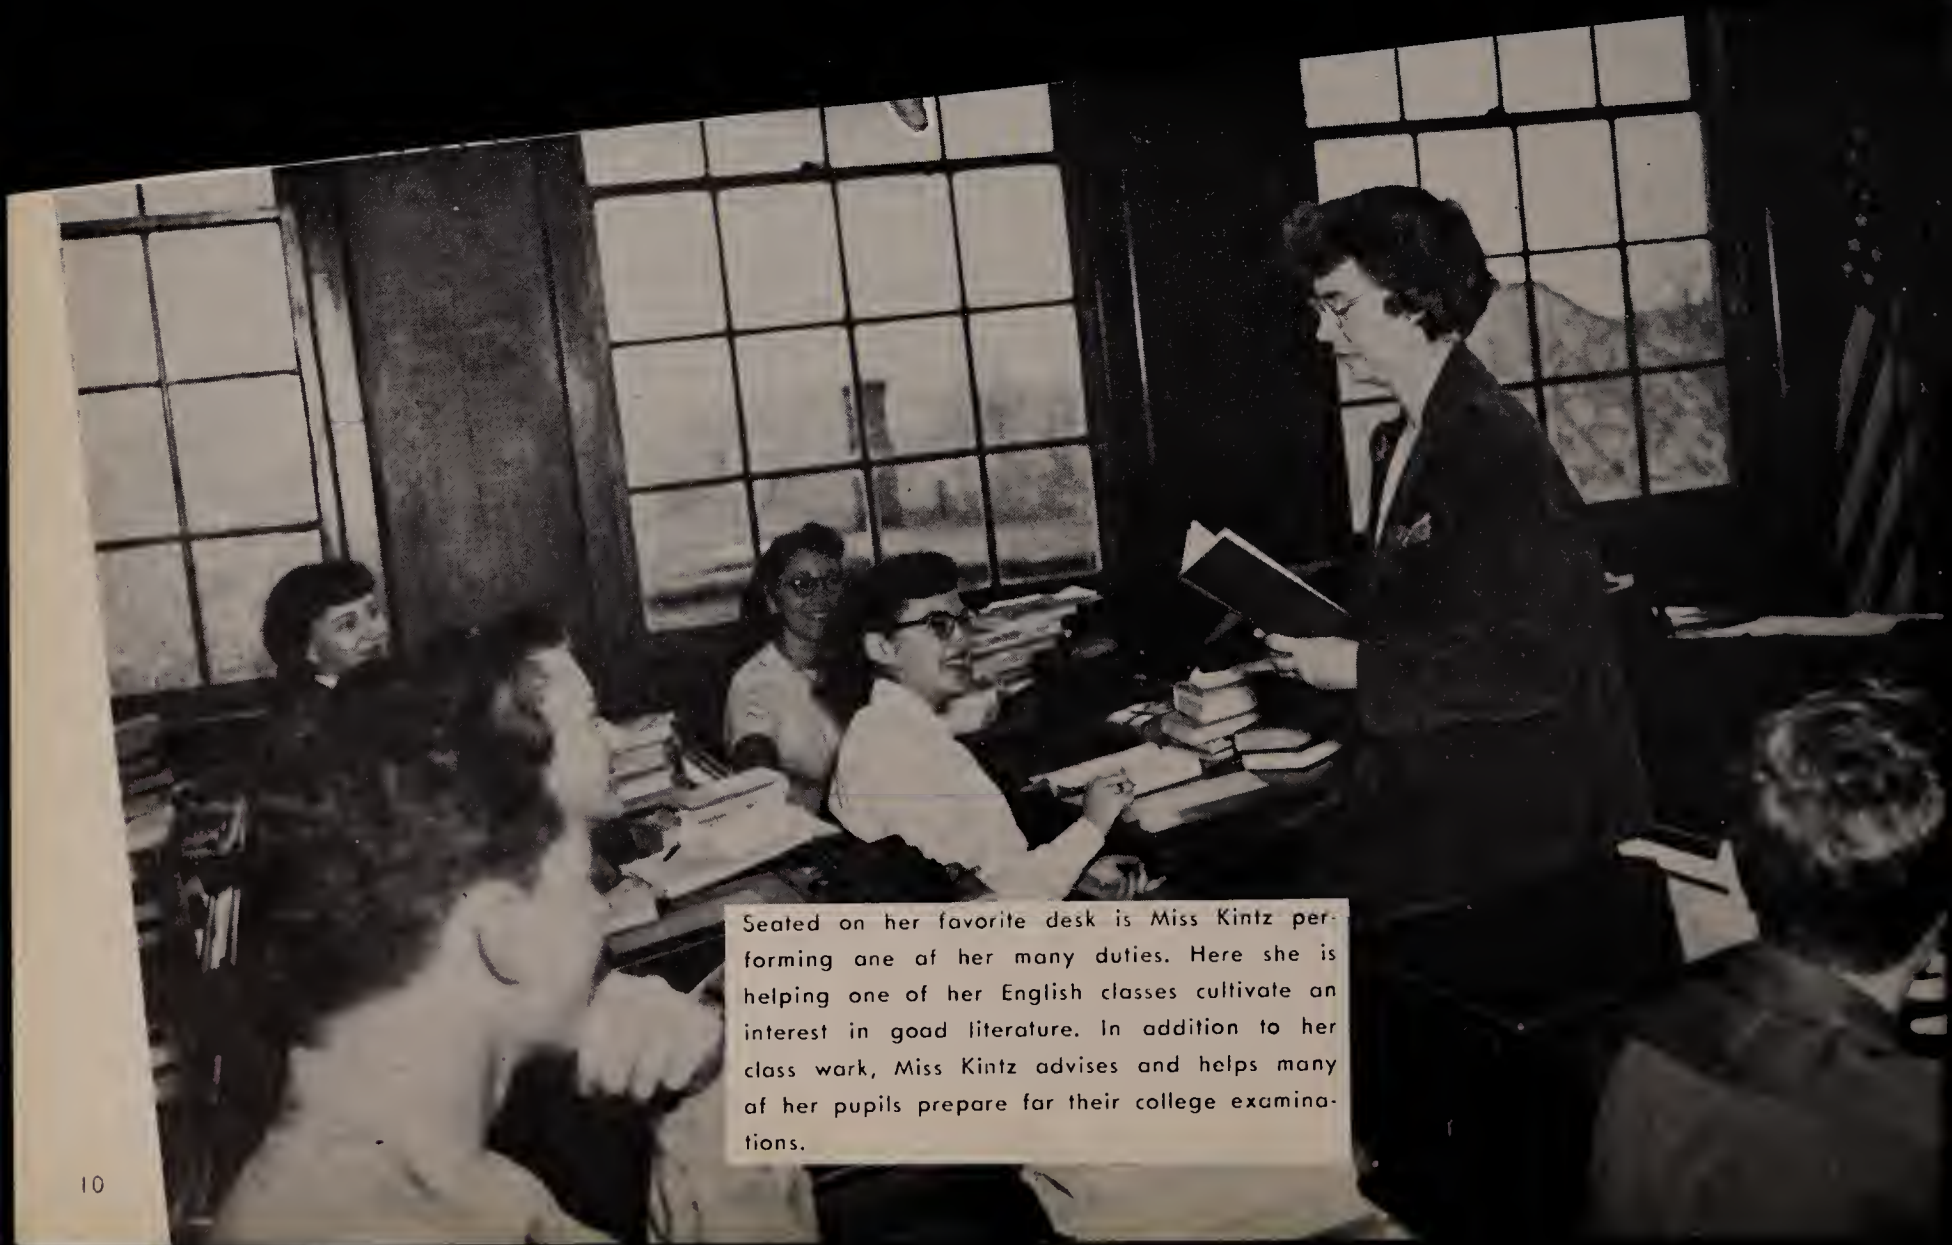

WE ACQUIRE KNOWLEDGE, SKILLS, AND

Seated on her favorite desk is Miss Kintz performing one of her many duties. Here she is helping one of her English classes cultivate an interest in good literature. In addition to her class work, Miss Kintz advises and helps many of her pupils prepare for their college examinations.

The staff of the English Department, under the direction of Mr. M. E. Stewart, is composed of a group of competent and well-trained teachers. The instructors of the sophomore and Junior English classes have the difficult task of teaching the pupils the basic points of English grammar and literature. In the senior year the English teachers prepare some of the pupils for the college board examinations. They also continue the work begun in the previous years.

Round and round the turntable goes as the juniors in Mr. Stewart's English class learn about vowels, diphthongs and consonants. Don't drop that record!

Ah! Breathe in that fresh air, as Miss Bligh's Commercial girls experience June in January. From the grin on Rosalind's face, she must find the breeze quite refreshing.

Miss Hand is wondering if this class of College Course sophomores has misplaced any modifiers lately.

English, like democracy, is an integral part of our lives. We speak, read, write, and think in English. There is never a day in which we do not use it. Here, in school, we become acquainted with authors of the past and present. And, with the aid of our teachers we improve our vocabularies, our reading ability and our spelling. Thus we learn to express ourselves clearly, to form our own opinions, and to communicate with others—three foundations for a sound democracy. In short, through English we learn to think for ourselves. And, by thinking for ourselves we make ours a working and living democracy.

Who would think that a register could make Miss Cogan look so pleasant?

The pupils listen attentively as Miss Cannolly explains the principles of English. Under her supervision, the English pupils acquire a satisfactory knowledge of this subject.

Miss Cax and her pupils derive a great deal of enjoyment as they use the wire recorder. This has been important in contributing to the English course.

The students diligently pay attention to their studying as Miss Kuhn endeavors to see that everything is comprehended. Under her guidance, the Senior English pupils receive an adequate knowledge of this subject.

Mr. Ridge and his commercial girls seem quite amused at having their picture taken. What's the matter girls? Can't you concentrate on your English lesson. With Mr. Ridge as their guiding influence, the girls learn all the essentials of Commercial English that will prepare them for the business world.

Recitation is part of the daily English class as Miss Burnett efficiently conducts it. This sophomore class is receiving their first taste of High School English. Answer Miss Burnett's question correctly. She has that rank book in her hand.

Mr. Green's English pupils seem ready to begin their lesson as he points out the beginning page. The students are eager to learn as Mr. Green enables them to study all the essentials of English.

Could that be an expression of relief or one of anxiety on Bobby's face? Mr. O'Brien willingly takes the papers from him. Our Senior Adviser is always ready to help all students.

WE STRIVE FOR

Mr. Garvey must be saying something very interesting and slightly puzzling from the expressions on Basil's and Salvy's faces. Could it be algebra?

Hi, Miss Burke. Is that smile for us? What's going on in geometry today? Our sophomore friends seem busily engaged in work.

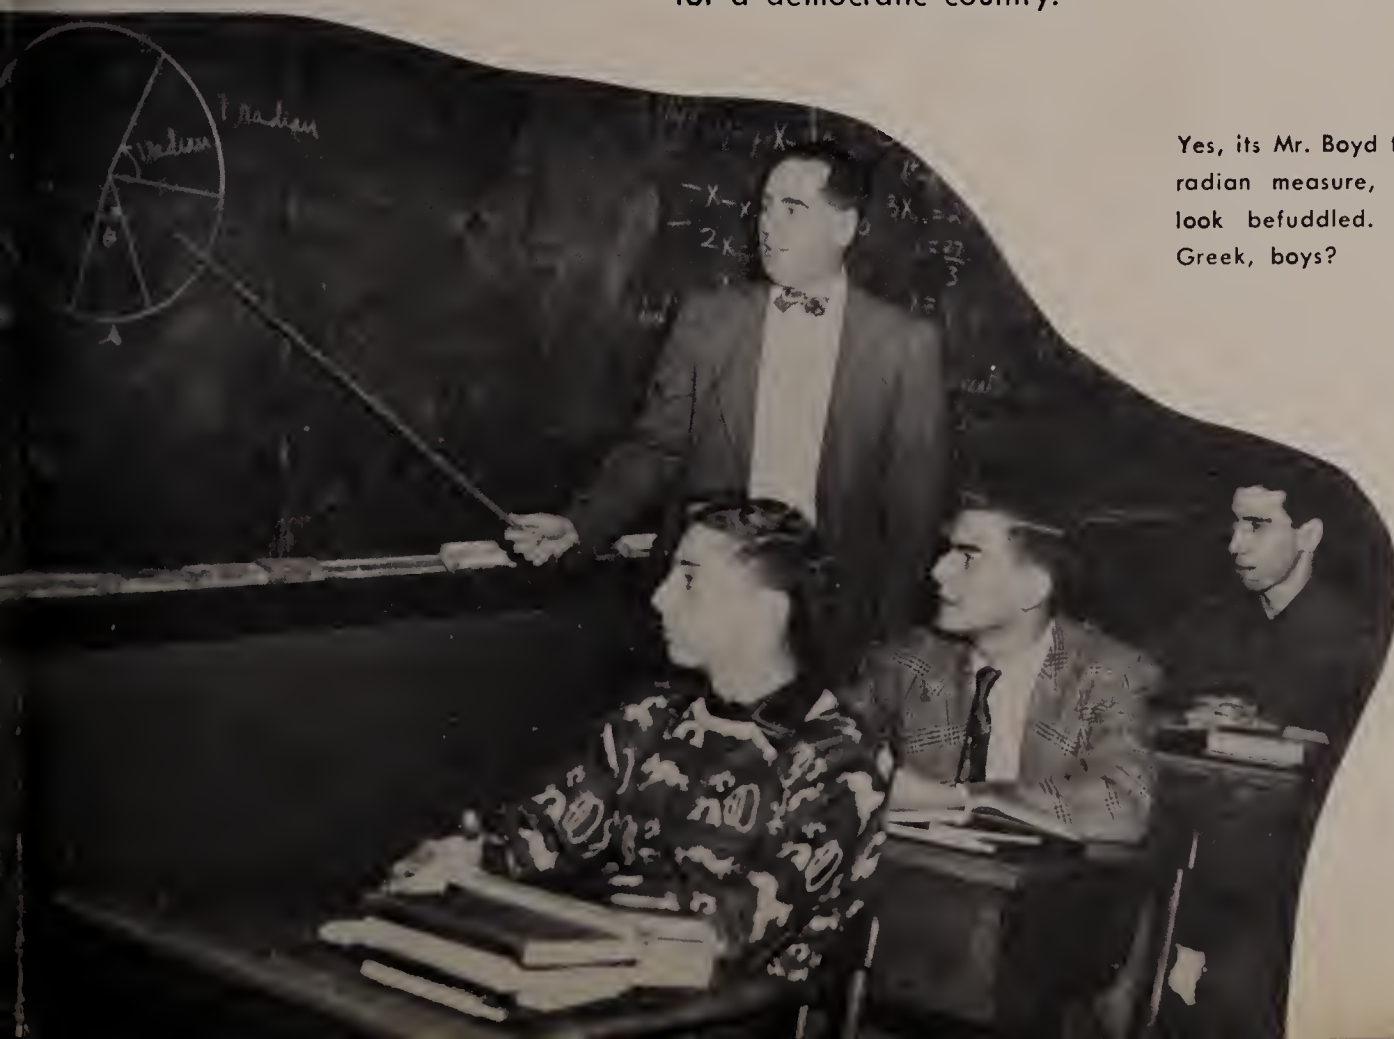

It seems as though Mr. Lowell is passing out a good deal of paper for that homework assignment. Don't shy away, Arnie. It can't be too bad. Three or four hours, that's all.

MENTAL DISCIPLINE

Mathematics, perhaps more than any other subject, is of inestimable value in training young high school boys and girls to take their places intelligently in this modern world. Many times, it is in the "math" class of today that America's great thinkers and scientists of tomorrow are born. Mathematics has a very vital place in any scholastic program, as it results in sound judgment and clear thinking for a democratic country.

Yes, it's Mr. Boyd teaching the Tech Course radian measure, and as usual the boys look befuddled. And you sure it's not Greek, boys?

SCIENCE . . . .

Mr. Margolis must be making the chemistry of the day quite interesting by the obsorbed look on Chester's face.

Here, at Chelsea High School, the Science Department is divided into three sections; physics, the basic science, the science of matter and energy; chemistry, the science dealing with the structure of matter within the molecule, and the changes that take place there; and biology, the science of life.

We learn how science influences our lives; for truly, science has been playing an important role in man's life since the days of the Stone Age. It has governed his actions; it has advanced him from the cave man era to the atomic age.

In short, scientific progress is essential for the well-being of all mankind. It is only by continued research and the right use of scientific knowledge for constructive purposes that civilization can continue to advance, or even exist, thus, bringing peace, better understanding, and better standards of living to all peoples.

Mr. Kipnes, one of our biology instructors, is explaining about the birds, bees, flowers and especially the twigs to a group of interested students.

Mr. Stoples instructing his class in Hooke's law.

Our national

for the business world

Business, the child of society, has adopted the principles of democracy. It provides for greater individual initiative and more opportunity for all. Business education has a contribution to make in the general education of youth which the American school system can not afford to value so lightly and use so little.

Mr. Clark, the head of the commercial department, is directing his class in book-keeping. Here he is walking up and down the aisle paying attention to each pupil's work.

All our bookkeeping students look happy. They must enjoy their subject. Here, Miss Shorood gives one of her students an approving glance as she inspects their work. Everyone's absorbed in her book-keeping except for one. She is too busy looking at the photographer to do her bookkeeping.

From the smiles on Miss Bradbine's and the pupil's faces, someone must have just cracked a joke in Spanish.

Miss Deasy is reading "Vergil" with her students in a typical scene in our fourth year Latin Class.

UNDERSTANDING OTHERS

While the Spanish class reads about the far away places and strange foreign lands, Miss McKenna, one of our Spanish teachers, obligingly points out the fascinating lands on the map.

This is a picture of the versatile Miss Anno M. Brodbine, who teaches both French and Spanish. She is an expert in these subjects as she has visited both France and Spain. She speaks both languages fluently.

Beside the map of France is the head of the French Department, Miss Connelly. It is evident that she is pointing out some specific place to her class even though they aren't in the picture.

The German class seems to be made up of gentlemen. They politely stand while Miss Severance, their German teacher, sits. This looks like a pleasant way to do German. Let's hope the fellows don't get tired; but since the subject, German, is so interesting I think they'll last the period.

WE PRACTICE

Miss Marjorie Chin is a fairly new addition to our faculty, a very agreeable one, and to anyone who buys hot lunches at the cafeteria, a very familiar one. Here we see two of her classes attempting to master the culinary arts. As we walk along the third floor corridor the luscious smells that come from the cooking room make us ready for breakfast at ten o'clock and for supper at one.

Two of our most interesting departments at Chelsea Senior High School are those of cooking and sewing. Very often because of the training received in these classes, the young ladies will decide to become fashion designers or dieticians. Or what can be more important than learning to manage a home skillfully and intelligently? Many times in school, perhaps too much emphasis is placed upon academic studies, but this practical training is equally as important as that of college preparatory and business, since it prepares girls not only for possible professions, but also for their most vital role, that of wife and mother.

Mr. Bernard M. Berensan, U. S. History teacher, here expounds on the subject of the Constitution and its importance to the inhabitants of the United States. The pupils all like Mr. Berensan because he brings a bit of humor into the classroom.

These four interested students are paying special attention to something on Mr. Pierotti's desk. He must be passing back the results of the last history test.

Miss Isroelite's Business Law pupil listens attentively as she offers assistance in guiding him in learning about law as it applies to the individual, to business and to society.

Miss Stearns watches over her pupils as they study their U. S. History lesson. These pupils learn all the essentials of history and practice the theme of democracy in everyday life.

WE PONDER

Studying the history of the world, its customs, and its peoples, is one of the most worthwhile practices of democracy. Understanding other country's beliefs relieves us of our bigoted thoughts (if we harbor them), and sets us thinking along the right track. At left is Miss Spring, who conducts such a class—and there we see her pupils, ready and willing to offer their opinions on the subject in discussion.

Classes in "Problems of Democracy" under the capable supervision of Mr. Harold I. Thompson, have a vital importance in the school curriculum, for they lead the students into intelligent thinking about our country and its government. As the young men and women study the policies of a democratic nation they naturally become familiar with the problems involved in running a government such as ours. Thus, by learning in school the problems facing a democratic nation, students are more fully prepared for later life when they must take their places as mature citizens.

Mr. Harold I. Thompson is another of our messengers of democracy. He explains to his class the everyday problems we encounter and offers solutions for them. Below we see him beside a map of the Americas, and one of the western Hemisphere.

THE PROBLEMS OF DEMOCRACY

World History, as taught here at Chelsea High, gives its students the background necessary for an understanding of present world conditions. The course traces the beginnings of democratic thoughts in man as his civilization grew more and more complex.

The threads of man's evolutions and glimpses of the Roman and Greek civilizations are picked up in the first part of the year, and carried over to include the Anglo-Saxon invasion of England.

Cultural, economic and religious trends then come to the fore as the renaissance and reformation are taken up.

Europe's many conflicts and the emergence of the United States as a World Power follow and complete the students' background.

This prosperous looking gentleman is Mr. Mox Leader, a history instructor. Mr. Leader's chief concern is in preparing his pupils thoroughly for their college board examinations, and also in giving them a fundamental education in the way their United States government was originated, and the manner in which it is now being run.

A course in Problems of Democracy is a course worth taking, for what is more important than studying the causes of trouble in these United States and trying to think of some remedy for them.

SKILLS,

Woodwork is one of the subjects taught in the Chelsea Senior High School. In this course the boys, instructed by Mr. Daniel Santry, make such useful articles as bookends, tables and record holders.

In the auto mechanics class the boys, under Mr. Arthur J. Hagan, study the functioning parts of the car.

The boys in the printing class, supervised by Mr. Floyd Folsom, this year once again have run off on the presses the report cards, the Shurtleff Shavings, and various other printing matter of the school.

Above left is Marshall Lamb pointing out the differences between the letters "d", "p", "b", and "g" to Mr. Folsom. From the apparent enthusiasm of the rest of the pupils the recitation must be just as illuminating to them.

At the left is Mr. Arthur J. Hagan illustrating the manner in which the wheel is placed on an automobile. The wrenches in Barry Tyrrell's and Frank Mugford's hands are ready for assistance.

Mr. Santry shows the proper use of the planing machine.

ART, APPRECIATION

As his class in music appreciation stands grouped around him, Mr. Francis X. Ridge, our school music teacher, plays music for them to appreciate. Mr. Ridge teaches music appreciation, music harmony, and also directs the school band.

Amid a colorful background of posters drawn by Chelsea High School students, Miss Pauline M. Kahlrausch, our drawing instructor, shows two eager students how to work the hand loom. This loom is one of the newest additions to our school and is lots of fun to operate.

In Room 304, Miss Kohlrausch gives an opportunity to every pupil to employ his talents. Every project taken up, in the study of color harmony, symmetry, and balance, provides some chance for the student to exhibit his individual talent.

One outstanding achievement of this year was the acquisition of a loom, which made it possible for the students to study weaving.

The art class has contributed several drawings to the yearbook and the school social functions which have added greatly to their appearance and interest.

Contemplating some mechanical difficulty we see Miss MacDonald and a student busily working. People are generally surprised to hear that we have a woman who is capable of teaching mechanical drawing.

WE PREPARE FOR

Democracy is clearly seen in sports. A participant has respect for rules, honesty, cooperation and love of fair play. A child who plays well is sure to be a good citizen. Physical education activities in Chelsea Senior High School are divided into many classifications. First, we have team games, such as basketball and softball. In another class, everyone is tested in a series of skills. These may include the standing broad jump and accuracy serves in volley ball. Health tests are given during the year which indicate the physical efficiency of each individual. Intramural sports include tennis, archery, bowling, golf, and dancing. Their value is immeasurable for use in later life.

Top—Exercise for healthy bodies.

ACTION

So many accidents happen every day that it is necessary for more people to have a knowledge of first-aid. From the extensive course given at Chelsea High School a student can handle any course within the limits of first-aid. Future life-savers from Chelsea will soon enter into the world.

It is important, not only to know how to aid in accidents, but also to know how to prevent accidents. From the course given at Chelsea High School teen-aged drivers learn the law thoroughly. It is without a doubt that Chelsea High drivers are the best.

Someone hurt? Nothing to fret about, not with this learned First Aid Class to come to the rescue. Listen carefully to Mr. Stane, girls, and to Miss Painter, if you want no braken banes.

Take heed student's, that's an important lesson you're learning. That underpass between Chelsea and Revere is dangerous, and Mr. McCarthy is going to teach you just how to approach it.

Left—"Use thase arm muscles bays, and lift thase badies up," says Mr. McCarthy.

We build

Lunch time is one period looked forward to by all. It is divided into three recesses, each consisting of twenty minutes. The seniors have the first recess, juniors the second, and sophomores third. In this way there are seats for everyone.

The students stand in line to await their turn for their hot lunch and then seat themselves at the tables. There is a snack bar to accommodate the other students who prefer a lighter lunch.

Perhaps the best known teacher at Chelsea Senior High is Mr. Albert F. Pierotti. Everyone, from the lowliest sophomore to the most high and mighty senior, is at least casually familiar with this cafeteria overseer. It is his job to supervise the traffic boys who must see that the cafeteria is kept in order. Heaven have pity on the individual that leaves a scrap of paper or a milk bottle on a table! Although we are sometimes annoyed at the petty inconveniences suffered, due to Mr. Pierotti and his helpers, really we must admit that they deserve much credit for our neat and respectable cafeteria.

Here is a scene typical of the girls in line for lunch. With pocket-books tucked under arms or hung over shoulders, they shuffle along waiting their turn for that long-awaited meal. Miss Chin, on the right stands by with Bernadette Silvia, to see that everything slides along smoothly. The favorite meal of the week is on Tuesday—frankfurts and beans, milk, bread and butter, and dessert—chocolate pudding or jello—and sometimes an apple, all for a quarter. Who could ask for anything more?

strong bodies and minds

Our library is under the capable supervision of Miss Flynn. Students are allowed to use the books for reference when studying in the library, or by permission from their homeroom teacher. When a student is in difficulty, Miss Flynn is there to help find the information needed. Books may be taken out for home reading under the same system that is employed in a regular public library.

and Chelsea Senior High is privileged to have a well-equipped one. The many reference books offer the students information for their subjects, and the excellent selection of fiction offers hours of enjoyment. The current magazines are always available for those who enjoy them. In its pleasant and quiet atmosphere, students may do their homework or read the various books. We will always be proud of the library at Chelsea Senior High School.

Our student government

Taking notes on all our daings, is Nancy Boyd, our class secretary. Her faithfulness and untiring effort in '49 was rewarded by a re-election to that office in '50.

Always smiling, always gay, ever see Nelson when he wasn't that way? I doubt it. The treasurer of the senior class is a care-free fellow with friends galore.

HODIERNI ROMANI

The purpose of the Latin Club, under the guidance of Miss Ella M. Deasy and Miss Agnes E. Burnett, is to furnish an opportunity for the pleasurable learning of much about the Romans and their civilization for which there is not sufficient time in class. By the skits and informal talks at each meeting, the pupil is given an outlet for his dramatic instinct as well as encouraging in him the desire to know more of the Classical World which has laid the foundation of our modern democracy.

Through the various presentations at each meeting we cultivate an understanding of mythology and Roman social and political tradition. Thus we fulfill our motto: Amicitiam et Scientiam per Latinum. (Friendship and Knowledge through Latin.)

RCULO DE ESPANOL

the direction
 once again
 because of the insistent demands of the students. The officers were elected immediately and the club started right in on an active program of culture and entertainment. In the meetings that were held this year, skits depicting Spanish life, Mexican dances and songs, and Spanish games were enjoyed by all due to the active participation and earnestness of all the members.

A feeling that a sturdy groundwork has been laid for the future Spanish students to follow, along with the hope that the Spanish Club will continue to give pleasure to the students is held by all of Las Clases de Espanol.

"Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer true!" Teddy Simons and Barbara Butler accompanied by the drum-majorette perform for us at the Thanksgiving Day rally. In the background we see our band in their red and black uniforms providing an excellent musical accompaniment.

This band, under the leadership of Teddy Simons, has played at many of our school functions. On the sax we have Sidney Perlow; Norman Diamond, on the trumpet; and Angelo Ruggello playing the drums. This group has helped make our Senior Play and Prom memorable affairs.

FUTURE VIEWS

Under the excellent supervision of Guidance, and the faculty, an enjoyable was once again arranged.

Career Day has been one of the of the school. It has aided greatly in on their future careers.

At the desk is Judge John W. MacLeod, a graduate of Chelsea High, who is now judge of the Chelsea District Court. He spoke on law as a profession.

On the platform is Dean Judsan R. Butler of Boston University, who was the principal speaker for Career Day. In a humorous, beneficial way, he gave advice on planning for the future.

Fred Olivero, one of our best basketball players, presides over the junior class when the president is absent.

Preparing

The junior class, like the senior class held their election of officers in the Fall of '49. A president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary, along with two representatives from each junior home room were elected. The title of this group is the Junior Council, and it meets at least twice a month to discuss the business of class rings, class photographer and the junior prom. The representatives report to their respective home-rooms, and after seeing how the majority of their fellow students think about the project beforehand, proceed to vote accordingly. In this fair, democratic manner the business of the class is settled.
